

How does Latam boarding work?

We divide the passengers into six different groups and boarding is done in three stages: pre-boarding, premium boarding and regular boarding.

Understanding how Latam Airlines boarding works is essential for a smooth and stress free travel experience. Latam Airlines provides a clear and organized boarding process to ensure all passengers can board efficiently and on time. The boarding process begins once passengers have obtained their boarding pass, either through online check in, mobile app check in, airport kiosks, or airport check in counters.

Pre Boarding Requirements

Before boarding, passengers must have a valid boarding pass and identification documents, such as a passport or national ID, depending on the flight destination. Travelers with checked baggage must also ensure their bags are properly tagged and checked in before heading to the boarding gate. Security screening is mandatory for all passengers, and those using mobile boarding passes can proceed directly through airport security, while those with printed passes may follow the same procedure.

Boarding Groups and Zones

Latam Airlines uses a boarding group system to organize passengers efficiently. Boarding groups are usually indicated on the boarding pass, and passengers are called in sequence according to these groups. First class and premium cabin passengers are typically invited to board first, followed by families with small children, passengers requiring special assistance, and finally economy class passengers based on their boarding group number. This method helps reduce congestion in the boarding area and ensures a smooth flow onto the aircraft.

Boarding Process at the Gate

When the boarding call is announced, passengers should proceed to the gate and have their boarding pass ready to be scanned by Latam Airlines staff. Both mobile and printed boarding passes are accepted, and staff will verify that passengers are boarding the correct flight. It is important to arrive at the gate on time, as boarding usually closes a few minutes before departure.

Important Tips for Passengers

Passengers should pay attention to announcements and monitor airport screens for gate changes or boarding updates. Arriving early at the gate allows sufficient time
